

ABSTRACT

A method includes checking the vertical blanking interval of a video signal for an announcement signal. When the announcement signal is found, operation is in a first enhanced video mode. When the announcement signal is not found, a predetermined trigger channel is checked for the presence of a trigger signal. When the trigger signal is found, operation is in a second enhanced video mode.